Montesquieu and the Pope.—A good story of Montesquieu has been disintered. It is said that when the author of The Esprit des Lois visited Rome, Pepe Benedict XIV wished to mark the fact by some sovenir, and said to him, "I give you permission to est meat all your lifetime and I extend the same indulgence to all your family." Montesquieu was, of course, intensely obliged at being released from the fasting orders of the church, and bade adieu to His Holiness with feelings of gratitude. Bhortly afterward the dispensation was sent to him, and he was presented with a little note of fees, amounting to rather a considerable sum. Montesquieu, astonished at this sacred impost, said, "I thank His Hellness for his kindness, but the Pope is so good a man that I will take his word alone."

workmen have been engaged in sinking an artesian well in Worcester, Mass. It has already reached the depth of 123 feet, of which the last 53 feet are in the solid rock, several water-bearing veins have been struck, but not sufficient to raise the water to the surface. Since Saturday last, it has been noticed that the water in the well rises and falls at nearly uniform periods, the fluctuation continuing from day to day. At the highest, the water rises 118 feet, or within 5 feet of the surface of the ground, and falls to 106½ feet.

"It is by no means unaccountable," she replied. "Unlike you, sir, (he is notorious for his political tergiversations,) unlike you, sir, I go for principles—not mem."

CINCINNATI, WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 1, 1860. The Panis Correspondents of the London Paris, writes as follows: At Galiguani's reading-room, to which I frequently resort, is to be seen every day an old man of small stature, with a face of the keenest intelligence, a beld forchead and thin grey hair; the brow is high and finely formed, and the face, when not buried in the newspapers, reveals all the traits of delicate and genial wit, which you are not astenished to recognize there when you have heard the name of the owner. It is no other than Father O'Mahany, but by his old nem de piume Father Prout—the Paris correspondent of the London Alobe; one of the most viciously sati-Ivish of London papers. Indeed he is not only correspondent, but one of the proprieters of that paper. It is singular to remark, by the way, that all the principal foreign correspondents of these London papers are Irishmen. The solemn person who wilke from Paris every day to the Times is a certain Mr. O'Meagher—a person descended from the same Tipperary clan, (I regret to say) with Thomas Francis of that the, but having with him nothing clee in commen. The two predecessors of this Mr. O'Meagher, in the same office, were also Irishmen; so that the Franch correspondence of the Times hasboen for many years furnished by writers of the sister island.

On the 14th of December, 1799, General Washington died.

Ot. Tuesday, January 7, 1800, The Spy, of this city, a weekly paper, published on that day, was draped in mourning, and had for amnouncement of the news these head-lines: "Mourel Columbia, Moural your Father, your Protector is gone!"

"We have the painful task of announcing to our readers the death of the most illustrious man that ever made his exit from this stage of mortality—General George Washington."

Baturday, February 1, 1800, was agreed on as the day to pay funeral honors to his memory.

The Spy of the 5th of February, 1800, contained the following article:

"And solemn mov'd along the cavalcade."

"Saturday last exhibited to this town a scene of mourning which it had never before witnessed. That day had been previously set spart for the purpose of paying the most solemn funeral honors to the memory of the man first in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen'—Gen. George Washington." In obedience to the orders of Major General Hamilton, Capt. Miller, the commanding officer at Fort Washington, had made arrangement for that purpose. The morning of the selemn day was announced by sixten discharges of cannon in quick succession.

At 12 o'clock, the troops formed on the flat in front of the garrison, where they were joined by Capt. Findlay's troop of horse, the Masonic brethen and a large concourse of citizens, all eager to testify their high vaneration for the character of the Illustrious deceased, and the deep sense which they entertained of his loss by paying this mournful tribute of respect to his memory.

The bies was received by the troops formed in lines, with presented arms, officers, drams and colors saluting.

The procession then moved on in the following order: Minute guns firing from the garrison, and the muslo performing a solemn direction of the garrison, and the muslo performing a solemn direction. "And solemn mov'd along the cavalcade."

ANOTHER IMMESS ENGLISH STRAMES.—The English Government is having built a steamer of immense proportions. Her water line is three hundred and fifty feet—over all three hundred and seventy-five feet, and breadth forty-six feet. She is by far the largest river steamer in the world. Her engines are two hundred horse power. She has to be impelled with paddles, and is hoped to attain in the Indian River, for which she is destined, thirteen miles an hour. The vessel is flat-bottomed, made for a shallow river, and when laden will only take two feet of water. She is made of steel, and will weigh about three hundred and seventy tuns. Her entire framework will be completed in about a month, when she will be taken to pieces and fitted up entirely on the Thames, and perform two experimental trips on the river. She is then to be taken entirely into sectional parts, put aboard a vessel and sent of to India.

One man trod upon one of the combastibles; it popped, and he jumped. His jumping greated a sile, and some one else stepped on another torpedo. A panic followed. The coffin having been deposited in the grave, a prayer, suitable to the occasion, was delivered by Rev. Mr. Wallace, after which the Masonic brethren performed their ceremony. Three discharges of musketry over the grave concluded the military selemnities.

His Excellency Governor St. Clair then delivered the following address:

Y"I thank you gentlemen—my followoitisens, I thank you all for this mark of respect which you have just paid to the memory of our friend.

"General Washington—that great and good man, who was not only the father of his country, but the friend and benafactor of mankind; for his life was a lesson, and it will be a lasting one to all who aim at being truly great or truly useful. Could virtue, my friends, have rescued from the grave, we should not now have had to perform this mournful ceremony, nor to lament the loss we have sustained. A heavy loss it is, and for which our grief is both decent and proper. But let us not sorrow as those who have ne hope. He is gone to those mansions of bliss where the spirits of just men are made perfect, to receive his glorious reward, and where nothing he did or suffered for his country will be forgotten! spirits of just men are made perfect, to receive his glorious reward, and where nothing he did or suffered for his country will be forgotten! For ourselves, indeed, we have much cause of sorrow, for he was removed from us at a most critical time—when our country is threatened from abroad and distracted by dissensions at home. But if we, my friends, with humble confidence, place our reliance on Almighty God, who raised him up and endowed him with all the talents that were necessary for the many great and important stations he was called in to the course of his Providence, and under whose guidance we were led to independence and attained our librrty, regulated and guarded by the best and wissest provisions, and we are true to virtue and ourselves, we need not fear that, should troubles encompass us, he will not again raise up fit instruments to lead us through them, and to accomplish all his gractous purposes toward us; and the many visible instances of His interposition in our favor, here-tofore, when svery probability was against us, and hope itself atmost extinguished while the recollection of it ought to excite in us the most lively grafitude, affords as good ground to be lisve that great things are intended for us as a nation if we do not disappoint them ourselves, and by our vices call down the divine pleasure. Of this, my friends, be assured, if we do not forsake God he will not forske us, and of this our deceased friend has left us both the example and the proof. He trusted in God and he delivered him from all his entered was peace."

Washington, January 30.— Resolutions were introduced in the Virginia House of Delegates to-day, declaring that while we recognize an imperitive necessity for decisive measures, in the present condition of things, yet we believe that prompt and efficient co-operation can be more safely attained by the direct and authoritative action of the constituted authority of the Southern States, than the agency of an assemblage which can have no legitimate power except to debate and advise; therefore, the General Assembly of Virginia will not at this time undertake to invite any conference of commissioners appointed by the authorities of the Southern States.

the General Assembly of Virginia will not at this time undertake to invite any conference of commissioners appointed by the authorities of the Southern States.

The Democrats in caucus made no nomination for Speaker, but appointed a committee to take action, with a view of concentrating the vote opposed to Mr. Pennington on one of their number, probably Mr. McClernand.

Mr. Briggs, it is understood, will cast a vote to-morrow for whoever may be supported by the Democrats, in reciprocation of the generous support of their candidate, Mr. Smith.

In the event of no election, he will then vote for Mr. Pennington.

Thaddeus Hyatt, President of the National Kansas Aid Committee, has written a letter, in answer to the subpens to appear before the Harper's Ferry Investigating Committee on the list of February, in which he informs the committee that while he will so far regard the summons as to appear before them, he will not answer any of their interrogatories, because he questions the exercise, by a legislative body, of powers purely judicial that are neither incident to the Government nor conferred by any express provisions of the Constitution.

In this position Mr. Hyatt is sustained by the best legal advice of Massachusette and New York.

In this position Mr. Hyattis sustained by the best legal advice of Massachusetts and New York.

Naw York, January 21.—The Tribure's Washington correspondent says: In the voting to-day for Speaker, Mr. Riggs gave his vote for Mr. Pennington. It would elect, but Mr. Briggs, who has repeatedly pledged his vote for Mr. Pennington, refusing te give it, Mr. Riggs then changed his vote from Pennington to McClernand, but will vote again for Pennington when his vote will elect.

The Herald's correspondent says: The Harper's Ferry Committee met to-day, but did not examine witnesses. The latter of Hyatt was read, but no action taken, the Committee preferring to wait until Mr. Hyatt appears before them on Wednesday. Hon. S. E. Sewell, of Boston, acts as counsel for Mr. Hyatt.

There is little doubt that if Hyatt refuses to answer the questions propounded to him by the Committee, he will be deemed a contumacious witness, and arraigned at the bar of the Senate for contempt. His reasons for not answering will then be the same as he gives in his letter. This will cause his committal. A writ of habese corpus will then be Issued for his release, and then the question will be brought before the Supreme Court of the United States and be legally tested. Mr. Hyatt will arrive here to-morrow.

Mr. Redpath, of Malden, and Sanborn, of Concord, Mass., it is said, will not appear. Dr. Howe will await the legal test to be made by Hyatt, before appearing. Giddings has not yet arrived, and may asswims the same position taken by Hyatt. Ras.'s is netified to appear on Wednesday, when the Committee will probably question him, an some new point. Since the discharge of Judge Arny as a witness before the Committee, he is reported to have said that if he had not been stopped by the Chairman, he would have shown that Brown was twent the Chairman, he would have shown that Brown was twenty-five miles from Ossawatemie on the night that Wilkinson, the Doyles and Sherman were killed. He says Brown told him he was not with the party, but that it was a rightsous deed. One of the party also told him Brown was not there, but was camped on Midda Croek.
